Summary

Jens Friis Lund is associate professor in forest governance in developing countries at the University of Copenhagen. His research has focused on natural resources governance in developing countries, in particular community forestry processes in Tanzania and Nepal. He has also done research on the political economy of timber governance in Ghana. Lastly, in a Danish context, he has done research-cum-advisory work on economic and social issues of hunting and other recreational uses of forests and natural landscapes. His research has featured in, among others, the journals World Development, Ecological Economics, Public Administration and Development, Conservation and Society, Biodiversity and Conservation, Society and Natural Resources, Environmental Conservation, Ecology and Society, International Forestry Review, Forest Policy and Economics, and Journal of Forest Economics. Present research interests focus on social equity concerns in forest management; conservation impact of popular participation in forest management; the political economy of high timber management and; the role of decentralisation of natural resources management in state-citizen relations. Jens is presently involved in a number of project activities in Asia and Africa as well as in Denmark. These include cooperation with universities in Kenya and Nepal on institutional and socio-economic studies of community forestry processes and conflict under the ‘Stabilizing Kenya by Solving Forest Related Conflicts (STAKE)’ and ‘Community based natural forest and tree management in the Himalaya’ projects (both are joint research-cum-capacity building projects). In the past five years, Jens has raised approx. €1.5 million for research and research-cum-capacity building projects. On education, Jens has taught in various graduate and undergraduate courses at University of Copenhagen for more than ten years and has been course responsible for the undergraduate course ‘Skov- og Naturforvaltningsøkonomi’. Jens has developed and teaches an MSc course entitled ‘Rural Livelihoods and Natural Resources Governance’ as well as PhD courses on social theory in natural resources management and political ecology. Finally, Jens has (co-)supervised six PhD theses (three ongoing), seven MSc theses, and three BSc theses.

Current and previous positions

- 2009 - Associate Professor, Forest & Landscape, University of Copenhagen
- 2007-2009 Assistant Professor, Forest & Landscape, University of Copenhagen
- 2003-2007 PhD-student, Institute of Economics, Forestry and Planning, The Royal Veterinary and Agricultural University

Honours

- 2011 O.H.F. and A.J-E. Heilmanns Grant for remarkable scientific achievements
- 2001 KVL’s grant for remarkable MSc Degree

Academic education and training

- 2010 'PhD supervision' course at KU
- 2008 'Teaching and Learning' course for Assistant Professors at KU
- 2007 PhD in forest policy and economics
- 2003 MSc in Forestry (cand.silv)
- 2004- PhD courses in 'Advanced Development Economics', 'Swahili' and 'Payments for Environmental Services and Market-based Instruments' at UoC 'Methodologies of International Development Cooperation', 'Political Theory and Political Sociology', 'Modern Sociological Theory', 'Applied Quantitative Methods – Introduction to Basic Econometric Techniques' and 'Applied Quantitative Methods – Intermediate Econometrics I' at Copenhagen Business School

Other education and training

2007- 'Conflict management for employees' (1 day), 'Collegial coaching' (2 days) and 'Navigation of the project in a chaotic environment' (4 days)

Fellowships

2009 Sokoine University of Agriculture, Tanzania (3 months)

2008 Tribhuvan University, Nepal (4 months)

Scientific assessments

2011 Chairman of the assessment committee for PhD Patricia del Carmen Uberhuaga, UoC. Thesis title: Forests, Communities and Poverty in Lowland Bolivia

2010 Assessment Committee member for PhD Josiah Zephania Katani, Wageningen University. Thesis title: The role of multiple institutions in the management of micro spring forests in Ukerewe, Tanzania

Teaching and supervision

2012 Course responsible and co-organizer of the PhD course 'Political Ecology'

2010-2011 Course responsible and main organizer of the PhD course 'Social Theory on Natural Resources Management'

2010- Course responsible for the MSc course 'Rural Livelihoods and Natural Resource Governance'. Student evaluation: 2010 (based on six students) 4.7 on a 5-point scale; 2011 (based on nine students) 4.4 on a 5-point scale.

2008 Course responsible for the BSc course 'Skov- og Naturforvaltningsøkonomi'. Student evaluation (based on three students) of 4.0 on a 5-point scale

2008 Co-organiser of the PhD course 'Decentralized Natural Resources Management'

2007 Responsible for two weeks of lecturing in the BSc course 'Business Economics of Forestry and Horticulture'. Student evaluation of 4.6 on a 1-5 scale

2005 Developing and teaching the PhD-course 'Theory and Application of Mathematics, Statistics, and Economics' at KVL

2002-2005 Lectures and primary responsible for the theoretical exercises in the courses 'Forest and Natural Resources Economics and Politics I (BSc) and II (MSc)' at KVL

2002 Instructor in the joint BSc and MSc course 'Investment and Finance' at KVL

2001 Instructor in the BSc course 'Introduction to Ecology' at KVL

2005- Guest lecturing or other smaller teaching commitments in the courses: 'Tema: Miljø, Natur og Samfund' – 310020 (2009); 'Forests and livelihoods in developing countries' (2009); 'Applied Forest and Natural Resources Economics' - 290003 (2005-2008); 'Global Environmental Governance' – 310073 (2010); 'Research Planning' – XXXXX (2011) and; 'Participatory Forest Management' (2006)

2007- Supervisor for six PhD theses:

Jane Mtunde. 2012-15. Impacts of forest decentralization on livelihoods and attitudes among farmers around the Mau forest complex in Kenya. On-going.

Jennifer Lauren Bond. 2010-13. Drought, conflict and development among small-scale farming communities in Kenya. Project Supervisor. On-going.

Kirsten Carlsen. 2009-12. Sustainable Management of Logging Concessions in Tropical Forests - Corporate Social Responsibility, Government Regulations, and Local Stakeholders. Principal Supervisor. On-going.

Aske Skovmand Bosselmann. 2008-12. Using Payments for Environmental Services to secure livelihoods and environmental services in coffee agroforests by Aske Skovmand Bosselmann. Project Supervisor. Thesis defended on June 8, 2012.

Mette Vinqvist. 2008-12. Payments for environmental services vs. command-and-control measures: Cost-efficiency of direct payments for environmental services and command-and-control measures in delivering continued supply of environmental services while retaining positive or neutral impact on poor households. Principal Supervisor. Thesis defended on June 1, 2012.

Martin Reinhardt Nielsen. 2007-10. Hunting for the Benefit of Joint Forest Management and Local Based Monitoring in Tanzania. Project Supervisor. Thesis defended on June 20, 2011.

2004- Supervisor for six MSc theses:

The constraints for production and market access by small holders and forest communities in FSC certified timber production in Peru by Maria Teresa Fresu, 2012.

Actors, power and accountability in Natural resource management: A case study of local multi-stakeholder governance in a watershed management project in Honduras by Marcus Finn Lamp, 2011.

Farm level and Organisational impacts of Fairtrade: Case study of Fairtrade coffee in Tanzania by Timothy Abeikis, 2010.

Poverty impacts of PES carbon in rural Tanzania: The case of households in a farming village by Reymondo A. Caraan, 2010.

Economic Contribution of Acacia Woodland Resource Use to Rural Livelihoods in Adami Tulu Jido Kombolcha District (Ziway), Central Rift Valley of Ethiopia by Tesfaye Getachew Habtie, 2010.

Feasibility study on practical PES mechanisms for conservation and improving livelihoods at Bukit Barisan Selatan National Park in Indonesia by Handuo CAI, 2009.

Participatory resource assessment in Tanzania by Nikolaj Jess Hansen and Jens Østergaard, 2004.

2007- Supervisor for three BSc and four smaller theses:

Learning barriers within a technology transfer process of improved charcoal production - A case study of a local forestry development project in the northern part of Mozambique by Vibe Jensen, 2012. (BSc)

Ud i det fri: Tilrettelægning af naturoplevelser [Into the wild: managing for good nature experiences] by Pernille Hansen, 2010. (BSc)

Experience economics on the Danish Vallø estate by Rune Tørnkvist Nielsen and Christian Gosmer, 2007. (BSc)

Forests decentralization effect over natural capital livelihood asset: forests management in three Latin American countries by Diana Patricia Rodriguez Paredes, 2010. (7.5 ECTS paper)

Methodological considerations regarding livelihoods research - with specific focus on rural livelihoods research in developing countries by Lindy Callen Charlery, 2010. (7.5 ECTS paper)

Optimal rotation age – Application of the classic Faustmann in ‘close-to-nature’ forestry by Maria Kock-Jensen, 2009. (3 ECTS paper)

Biofuels and the effects of large-scale land investments on land access and the displacement of rural livelihoods in Africa by Darren Brown, 2012. (2½ ECTS paper)

Leadership of larger research efforts

- 2011- Project leader on the research project ‘Hunting, Game management and Society’ financed by the 15. Juni Foundation. The objective of the project is to improve our knowledge about legislative and social factors affecting practice within landscape improvements for wildlife and hunting. Size of project group: 9 people from 2 institutions.
- 2008-2009 Project leader on a research project under the ComForM Phase II Project with a focus on identifying the institutional characteristics of communities and Community-Forest User Groups (FUG) that affect distributional equity in management and benefit sharing in community forestry in Nepal. A variety of research methods were applied to collect data at FUG (n=45) and household (n=1,110) levels on wealth indicators, forest incomes and indicators of institutional performance of the CFUG. Size of project group: 5 people from 2 institutions.
- 2007-2008 Project leader on ‘The Danish Forests in an Experience Economy’. The objective of the project is to identify and describe new recreational goods and services that Danish private forests can supply. Size of project group: 6 people from 2 institutions.
- 2007-2008 Project leader on ‘Identifying alternative income sources for the forestry sector: Case- and feasibility studies’. The objective of the project is to test a few of the ideas from the above project (The Danish Forests in an Experience Economy) in cooperation with two larger Danish forest estates. Size of project group: 6 people from 2 institutions.

Country experience

Tanzania (1½ year), Nepal, Mozambique, Ghana and Kenya.

Research grants (total app. DKK 19 million)

The Danish Council for Development Research, DFC no. 11-036KU, 2011: Grant for research and education capacity development project entitled “Stabilizing Kenya by Solving Forest Related Conflicts” with Vibeke Vindeløv (Lead applicant) and Jens Emborg. Total grant app. DKK 8.5 mio. The project parts my department is responsible for amount to:

Approximate grant size: DKK 2.500.000

Grant from '15. Juni Fonden', 2010: Grant for research project entitled "Hunting, Wildlife Management and Society" with Bo Jellesmark Thorsen (Lead applicant), Christian Gamborg, Frank Søndergaard Jensen, Jens Emborg, and Palle Madsen.

Approximate grant size: DKK 6.000.000

WWF-Novozymes grant, 2010: Grant for the project "Social Dimensions of REDD – A Comparative Perspective" aimed at supporting four PhD students at FLD in doing research on social aspects of REDD.

Approximate grant size: DKK 100.000

The Danish-American Fulbright Commission, 2010: Grant for visiting scholarship at the University of Illinois, August-November 2011. (Awarded the grant but never used it).

Approximate grant size: DKK 200.000

The Danish Council for Independent Research - Social Sciences (FSE), j.nr. 09-075721, 2009: Grant for developing an application to the EU FP7 call 'Env.2010.2.1.1-1'.

Approximate grant size DKK: 110.000

Erasmus Mundus Action 3 Scholar Scholarship awarded by the 'SUTROFOR' Consortium, 2008: Grant for 3 month visit to the Institute of Forestry in Nepal.

Approximate grant size DKK: 100.000

The Danish Council for Independent Research - Social Sciences (FSE), j.nr. 275-07-0194, 2007: Grant for Post.doc.-project entitled "Local Finances, Livelihoods and Legitimacy - Decentralised Natural Resources Revenue Collection in Nepal and Tanzania".

Approximate grant size DKK: 1.668.000

The Danish Council for Development Research, j.nr. 104.Dan.8.L.725, 2007: Grant for Enreca project entitled "Applied Research in Participatory Forest Management" with Thorsten Treue (Lead applicant) and Ida Theilade. Total grant app. DKK 5.0 mio. The project parts my department is responsible for amount to:

Approximate grant size DKK: 2.500.000

Tanzania Ministry of Natural Resources and Tourism, 2007: Grant for research project entitled "Applied Research In Participatory Forest Management (PFM) - Assessing Under Which Conditions PFM Contributes To The Goals Of Poverty Reduction, Sustainable Forest Management And Improved Local Governance" with Associate Professor Thorsten Treue (Lead applicant).

Approximate grant size DKK: 1.500.000

The Danish Council for Development Research, j.nr. 104.Dan.8-860, 2004: Grant for PhD-project "Institutional and Economic Aspects of Participatory Forest Management in Tanzania".

Approximate grant size DKK: 120.000

The Royal Veterinary and Agricultural University, 2003: Grant for PhD-study entitled “Institutional and Economic Aspects of Participatory Forest Management in Tanzania”.

Approximate grant size DKK: 1.830.000

Various smaller (DKK 10-50,000) grants for PhD project and organizing PhD courses from Oticon Fonden, Heilmann’s Fond, REFOLANA research school at S&L, CRS-NR research school conglomerate.

Approximate total grant size DKK: 150.000
