The Wangari Maathai Institute for Peace and Environmental Studies (WMI) holds a successful wrap up workshop for the launch and grow program on May 29, 2017 at the College of Agriculture and Veterinary Sciences. Launch and Grow is women's entrepreneurs' mentorship program whose first phase was implemented by Babson College and the second phase by WMI in collaboration with the Fundacion Mujeres Por Africa (FMxA). The mentorship program was delivered through webinar sessions and local workshops. The women entrepreneurs were able to participate in the three webinars pre-reviewed by Kenyan Faculty for contextualization purposes. Moreover, during the three different workshops, the women entrepreneurs interacted with experienced panelists on finance, business growth and corporate governance. The wrap up workshop provided a platform through which they sought clarification on the key themes and also gave their observations about the program and recommendation for subsequent program. The entrepreneurs extended their appreciation to Babson College, FMxA, WMI and the panelists for sharing invaluable knowledge and experiences that will go along impacting positively on their businesses. WMI also wish to thank Babson College and FMxA for their support and all that participated and contributed to the success of the program.
